WANTED---A GOOD EATER

The advertisement read: "Wanted-Four young ladies. Must be fine looking and of engaging manners." I went. The establishment was an eating saloon. Over its door glaring fat letters of gold informed me and all passers by that it was a "Restaurant for Ladies and Gentlemen." Everything in it was brand new and quite tasteless—gandy. A a small catter. You did lie—did you? shiny, veneered partition to one side didn't you?—hey? hey?"
had another gold lettered sign glued to "Oh," I answered, when I could catch had another gold lettered sign glued to it, "Cash Department." Under this sign was a little window set upon a marble slab, and in the little window the face and shoulders of a man. The face was very red, very wrinkled and very fierce. The head to which the face belonged was very small, with scanty stiff black hair on end all over it. The shoulders r; a which the head was set had a pa, on breasted trunk between them, and were very narrow and very sloping. As I came in the man put his little head out of his little window and looked eagerly and fiercely at me. I walked up to his window and told him why I came. He could see but the upper part of me. "Stand back," he said. I did so, and he looked me over. "I want girls," he said; "but-can you

His question surprised me. Most girls can. I could. Just then I was very indeed, did he look as he repeated and amended his question.

"Am I to eat here, sir?" I asked tremblingly. "Eat? Of coursel" said he.

Now, I did not understand whether he wanted me to scrub the floors, wash the dishes, take the money or what, but I did understand, I thought, that he was speculating (with a view to economy) upon my ability and inclination to devour much or to live upon nothing. So, always truthful as I am, I answered, "I am a very small eater, sir." "Won't do!" said he,

"Sir?" said I. "Won't do! Don't suit!"

I was sorely disappointed. Tears came io my eyes My eyelids and my lips, too, trembled.

"Don't cry---in here!" he said fiercely 'Don't cryt Sorry-very sorry-can't help it-don't suit-won't do!"

"Is my appearance not what you desire, sir?" I ventured to ask. "Look well-you're a beauty-very sorry—can't engage you?"

Although I was somewhat doubtful of my rank as a beauty, I knew myself te be a passibly good looking girl, and I readily forgave him his exaggeration; especially as I did not understand my beauty to be a bar to my engagement. "My manners, sir," I said, "are good-engaging. If you could see me wait at table, say for one day, if that is what you want help for"-

"Wait at table—nothing! Got waiters—lots! Don't suit—won't do!"

"You doubt my ability to please? You judge of my usefulness or my manners without having had opportunity"

"No, no, no! Manners charming! But you don't suit-won't do!" Queer, I thought. You're a beautyl Manners charming! Don't suit and won't do. Why? Wherefore? Curiosity, as well as want, stimulated me to ask the fierce little man: "Why don't I suit you, sir?" Then, fiercer than ever before, he said: "Don't bother-any more! Small eater-don't suit-won't do!" And he slammed a book upon his marble slab and moved away from his little window -to get rid of me.

I reflected that it might have been well for me to have asserted that I did not eat at all, but I was bright enough, even in that moment of disappointment and vexation, to appreciate that he would not have credited the statement. Then I was outraged by his assumption that I must be a glutton simply because of my claim to temperance and moderation in eating. Angered by this and by his nurensonable rebuffs, knowing he would hear me behind his gaudy partition, I said while moving toward the door: "What meanness! If I had opportunity I would eat you out of house and

"Hey? What's 'at?" he yelled, as he bounced back into his little window and stuck his fierce little head through it at me. "What's 'at? Eat house and home? Hey? Hey?" He looked so alarmingly fierce that, in fear that he might eat me my progress to the door-and out-was very much accelerated.

But before I knew it he was at my side, on the adjoining sidewalk. He seized my hand, and half pulled, half coaxed me back again: "Come, girl! Please, girl-come in-come back-vent it, he had me back into his place, and closed the door and had planted bimself against it.

"House and home—you said, you—eat some one—out of? Did you? Didn't you? Hey?" His fierceness seemed transformed to a triumphant intensity as he spoke and guarded the door against my escape.

When I could gather a sufficiency of my cattered wits together to do it, I replied defiantly: "I would! I said I would if you employed me!"

"Hey? Hev? You would? You would?" "Yes, I Would! - Angrily

"Stop! Stop!" he cried; "blamed hard, All right. Make it six."

"Six dollars a week, sir," I replied, "secures my services; to eat being my duty." Then, in view of the odd, the seemingly fabulous nature of this barcaution, of which stock, prompted me to add, "If paid weekly and in advance."

It was taken from J. J. Quinn's corral on the night of the 15th itst. A liberal reward will be paid for the 15th itst. A liberal reward will be paid for the property of the painted and the contract and

He touched a bell, a waiter appeared, I ordered something and ate it. He—the fierce little proprietor of the restaurant-again retired behind his gaudy partition, and then his head and shoulders reappeared in the little window where they spent the day. During its course he, with my efficient aid, engaged (at four dollars a week and not paid in advance) three additional girls, who joined me in the arduous employment assigned me.

It was his plan to obtain customers for his restaurant; by demonstrating to the public that he did some business, he hoped to attract it and do more. He had opened the place just a week before I came, and had spent the week, as he afterward informed me, in devoting the contents of his little head to the elaboration of a plan to possess himself of the only thing lacking in the restaurant—

He kept us four coming in, eating and going out. He had a friend and confidant a couple of blocks away, with whom he left an assortment of hats and wraps; we went there and changed our appearance between "eats." He enforced this routine: It was eat, go out, change costume, come in, eat, go out—all day and htp shoes, full stitch, for $5. Try a pair. Reevening. The People's party and Farmers' Alliance of California met in joint convention at Los Angeles, adjusted their political differences and adopted a platform. The new party renounces all allegiance to old political parties, approves the platform adopted at Cincinnati May 19, 1891, and demands the abolition of National banks, the substitution of Treasury notes for bank notes to be leaned on nonperishable products at low interest; the free and unlimited coinage of silver; the forfeiture of all land grants, not actually in use, by railroads, and that all revelormey General claims the omission of for an immediate trial of the Davis will nue shall be limited to the expenses of the Government. > There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put to gether, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great nany years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circular and testimonials. Address.

RAIN MAKING EXPERIMENTS

Railroad Officials Auxious to Try Them Practical men are beginning to have confidence in the rain makers. John S. Ellis, who had charge of the Government rainmaking experiments in Texas, is now on his way to Mexico where he goes at the invitation of prominent railroad officials to make experiments in rain making. He expresses himself as being well satisfied with the success of the series of experiments made under the auspices of the Government and believes they have demonstrated that artificial rain making is not only feas-

Mr. Ellis says the cost of the rains produced at Midland, Texas, and San Diego, California, was only half a cent per acre, while the benefit was ten cents per acre.

If rain can be produced when required at a nominal cost per acre, as Mr. Ellis believes it can be, the problem of irrigation will be solved as the cost of irrigating an acre of land with rain will be much less eleven to one in favor of the press, but in than it can be done by ditches even if there was plenty of water to run in the ditches,

It is rumored that the Central Pacific Railroad Company will contest the validity of the horizontal raise of 15 percent on the valuation of the road made by the Board of Assessors and Equalization. It is claimed that the Act creating the Board did not authorize an increase of valuation on railroad property after it had been assessed by the Board.

Theodore Winters, who arrived in Reno last night, says it is not true that he instructed Judge Mayenbaum to draw on him for $500 or any other sum, for the purpose of testing the constitutionality of the Act creating the State Board of Assessors. He will, however, contribute proportionately with others to a fund to test the Act in the courts.

MME. BARRIOS.

The New York Guatemalan Beauty to Marry Again.

President Barrios of Gua'emala was killed in battle on April 2, 1885. Four years before, when he and his beautiful wife were making a tour of the principal countries of the world, he bought for her a mansion on Fifth Avenue, New York, and invested largely in American securities for her benefit. When, therefore, he feil in battle and her life was in dancer, she found an oppulent provision in this country for herself and her eight children. The widow of the terrible Barrios is an amiable and accomplished women and an ornament of the highest. American society. Now that Spanish newspapers report that she is engaged to marry Senor Martinez Rods, a member of the Parliament of Spain and a wealthy resident of Granada, much public interest is manifested in the announcement.

The manner of Barrios' wooing her was eminently characteristic of that imperious statesman and warrior. She was the daughter of Juan Aparico, proprietor of a large coffee plantation of Quezaltenango, Guatamala. On a visit to her father, Barrios saw her, became enraptured with her beauty and asked her hand in marriage. Aparico declined the honor of having the President for a son-in-law, on the ground of her being too young to marry, and his daughter fled from home to escape the attention of her lover. Thereupon Barrios put her father in prison and kept him there until the young lady returned and last Tuesday. He was standing on a truck avowed her willingness to share her life

Young Barrios, of whom the papers have spoken recently in connection with civil troubles reported to have taken place in Guatamala, is not a son of Mmr. Barries. He was born before her marriage to the President, of a mother said to have been in
